TVK chief Vijay calls for celebrating Nov 1 as Tamil Nadu Day

Chennai, Nov 2:

Actor and Tamilaga Vettri Kazhagam (TVK) party chief Vijay on Friday urged that November 1 be celebrated as Tamil Nadu Day. In a post on X, Vijay highlighted the significance of the date, which commemorates the sacrifices made by "border fighters" who worked to unite Tamil-speaking areas into Tamil Nadu.

"November 1 marks the day when our state became geographically distinct with the establishment of linguistic provinces in 1956. Martyr Shankaralinganar went on a hunger strike and sacrificed his life, demanding that our state, then known as Madras province, be renamed Tamil Nadu. Inspired by his vision, the compassionate leader, Perunthagi Anna, passed a resolution in the Legislative Assembly upon taking office and officially named the state Tamil Nadu," the TVK chief stated.

He further added, "Let us honor this historic day, November 1, as Tamil Nadu Day, celebrating the birth of a separate state for Tamils with rich memories of our past."

Notably, Tamil Nadu was originally established as Madras State on November 1, 1956, following a reorganization based on linguistic lines. Tamil Independence activist Sankaralinganar played a significant role in advocating for the name change. After being imprisoned for six months in Tiruchirappalli (Trichy) for his activism, he continually pressed the Congress party to address his 12-point agenda, with renaming the state as 'Tamil Nadu' being the primary demand.

His ultimate sacrifice came in the form of a hunger strike, during which he fasted to death to achieve his vision. In 1967, under the leadership of then Chief Minister CN Annadurai, the Madras State Legislative Assembly unanimously passed a resolution to rename the state as Tamil Nadu on July 18, 1967.

India's biodiversity goals focus on three main areas. The first theme, "Reducing Threats to Biodiversity," outlines eight targets.

Action Plan (NBSAP), aiming to protect at least 30 percent of the nation's major biodiversity threats, including land and inland water, and coastal and marine areas by 2030, aligning with global biodiversity targets. The plan was introduced at the 16th UN Biodiversity Conference in Cali, Colombia.

The NBSAP features 23 national targets, mirroring the 23 global goals set by the Kunming-Montreal Global Biodiversity Framework (KM-GBF), adopted at the 15th UN Biodiversity Conference in Canada in 2022. One of KM-GBF's key objectives is the conservation of at least 30 percent of the world's land and ocean ecosystems by 2030, along with restoring degraded environments, such as forests, wetlands, and rivers, to ensure they continue to provide essential resources like clean air and water.

India, one of the 17 megadiverse countries, joined the UN Convention on Biological Diversity (CBD) in 1994 and hosts 7-8 percent of the world's recorded species within just 2.4 percent of the global land area.

From 2017-2018 to 2021-2022, India spent approximately Rs 32,200 crore on biodiversity conservation. The average projected annual expenditure for these efforts is estimated at Rs 81,664.88 crore through 2029-2030.

India's biodiversity goals focus on three main areas. The first theme, "Reducing Threats to Biodiversity," outlines eight targets.

The initial five address major biodiversity threats, including land and sea use changes, pollution, species overexploitation, climate change, and invasive alien species.

The remaining targets emphasize ecosystem restoration, managing genetic and species diversity, and ensuring the sustainable and legal use of wild species.
